

Population and Sample

Population is the entire group or individual or item that we want to study

Sample is the smaller subset that we actually observe or measure. we use it to draw the conclusion about the population as a whole.

We have to randomly pick the sample.