

Point Estimation

It is a statistical method used to estimate an unknown population parameter, such as a mean or proportion, by calculating a single "best guess" value, known as a point estimate, from sample data.